

Dear AISZ Community,

We hope you are all safe after the earthquake this morning. We've been able to check in and account for our faculty and staff. All are safe and the school building is undamaged.

A large number of our teachers are moving in with friends due to extensive damage to their homes, others are at home but without internet services at all - or at best sporadic or intermittent service. This may be experienced at different times in different parts of the city and you maybe experiencing it too.

Because of these factors there will be no face to face VLP classes tomorrow, Monday, March 23. In the meantime, students should use the time to complete any work they have been set by their teacher, be creative at home, or engage in any challenging learning activities or help around the home to clean up and lend assistance.

After we know more tomorrow, we will send an email update.

Yours sincerely,

Paul Buckley
